Opportunities

Computer science and Engineering graduates are the pillars of the current and emerging information era. Opportunities include pursuing Masters of science Programs in reputed Universities of U.S and taking up research assignments in Hardware, System, Software, Computer Engineering, Multimedia, Networking and Communication area.

Job opportunities are ever increasing and are varied in nature. System study, analysis, Design and Programming are the inherent places in Application Development and each one of them provides enormous potential to the Computer Science and engineering graduates to shape themselves in themselves in their career. Hi-end profiles include Artificial Intelligence, Robotics, Graphic Solutions and Simulations.

The degree program prepares students for advanced technical work in computer systems design and development. It includes database design, data communications, procedural and object-oriented programming, operating systems design, algorithm development, and applications of artificial intelligence. The curriculum includes foundational coursework in electronics technology and programming languages. Graduates are qualified to work in positions ranging from entry-level computer scientists and system engineers to project managers, advancing the field with real-world applications.
